

Responding unhelpfully to anger

The way we react to someone who is angry can be either helpful or unhelpful. This includes how we respond to our children's anger – our reaction will either make it better or worse.

Imagine a situation where a child is cross about something or someone other than the parent. Their deepest need is for their mum or dad to understand why they are upset.

